MOUNT SCOUTIMANJARO

What's in this for you?

Chances are, you are a Scout leader because you want to do things with and for your children and their friends. Mount Scoutimanjaro is a tool for helping them learn to deal with fear, that nasty little voice inside their heads telling them they'll get hurt. Mount Scoutimanjaro has auto-belays — cables with independent hydraulic systems for each route — which automatically control the descent of a climber to the speed of a slow elevator. The perception of risk is high, but when rules and procedures are followed, the impact and likelihood of risk is very low.

Perhaps your District or Unit is holding a Join Scouting Night, a Day Camp, a Camporee, or supporting a community event. If you have qualified staff, you could rent Mount Scoutimanjaro. The minimum staff is an adult lead instructor (at least 21 years old) and at least one assistant instructor (at least 18 years old). With only two staff, one or two climbers can be on Mount Scoutimanjaro at a time. If either staff member leaves, operation must stop. The more staff you have, more people can climb.

If you are a leader of older Scouts, Venturers, or Sea Scouts, those youth can help with crowd control, helmeting, harnessing, coaching, and running all the operations within their level of training and ability. Your job as an adult leader would be to provide oversight and demonstrate to those who are not in Scouting how the Scouting program builds character.

Who can climb Mount Scoutimanjaro?

Age is no limit. It's a matter of weight, gear, and grit. Mount Scoutimanjaro can handle climbers who are between 40 and 250 pounds, provided we have a helmet and harness that can fit snugly. Then it's a question of the climber being willing to try. Parents are also allowed to climb. With enough staff, we can set up routes so parents can coach alongside their children. I doubt a climbing gym would allow that.

What next?

Your next step is to sign up for training at <https://247scouting.com/forms/081-mobileclimbingtraining>. There's an online portion and a hands-on assessment.

If you have questions, please email them to camping@dmvc.org.

When you've been trained, you'll be able to rent and run Mount Scoutimanjaro. Until then we have staff that we can hire to run the wall for you.
